

A black and white photograph of an archaeological site. The ground is uneven and appears to be composed of soil or sand with some small stones. A vertical trench or channel has been dug into the ground on the left side. In the center-right area, there is a scale bar consisting of two parallel lines, one solid and one dashed. Below the scale bar is a small white rectangular label with the number '264' printed on it in black. The lighting is bright, casting shadows on the ground.
